Abstract. Adaptive traffic signal control dynamically adjusts traffic signals based on prevailing traffic conditions. The acquisition and processing of real-time traffic data play a crucial role. The emerging trend of "big data", characterized as "three Vs", i.e., Volume, Velocity and Variety, potentially enables novel signal control concepts and more effective adaptive signal control implementations.

Summary. The real time application of large adaptive filters ( thousands of coefficients) with a small processing delay (a few milli-seconds) and good convergence behaviour, as needed in, for example, the acoustic echo canceller, is not possible with the currently available adaptive filtering algorithms.

The Adaptive Transaction Model is an extended transaction model with a nested structure containing optional and required subtransactions. Adaptive Transactions (ATs) have time constraints to support real-time database applications. Optional subtransactions can be omitted during the execution if time does not permit.
